COMPLAINT FOR DAMAGES AND DECLARATORY AND INJUNCTIVE RELIEF

1. Plaintiffs Geoffrey Calhoun, Benjamin Cheaves, John Curran, Alan Dale, Mark Danak, Christopher Daniels, Thomas Fast, Sean Gaboya, Thomas Hayes, Brian Hughes, Kenneth Keck, Nicholas Koperski, Robert Marlow, Raymond Matheson, Robert McLendon, III, Saverio Monteleone, Matthew Presley, M. du-Wayne Ray, David Shepherd, Allan Vives, Ramey & Kelley, Inc. d/b/a Atlanta Eagle, and Rawhide Leather, Inc. (collectively, "Plaintiffs), by their attorneys, for their Complaint against Defendants Richard Pennington, in his official and individual capacities, City of Atlanta, B.E. Bridges, in his individual and official capacities, Marlon O. Noble, J.G. Watkins, and "John/Jane Does" 1-45 (collectively, "Defendants"), allege as follows:

NATURE OF THE ACTION

2. This Complaint asserts a civil rights action pursuant to 42 U.S.C § 1983 for damages and declaratory and injunctive relief to redress Defendants' violations of Plaintiffs' rights under the United States Constitution and Georgia Constitution to be free from unreasonable searches and seizures and to ask questions of and make comments to police officers regarding the discharge of their duties. This Complaint also seeks redress for the numerous state law torts committed by individual Defendants, including false imprisonment, assault, battery, and trespass.

3. Defendants violated the Constitution and committed said torts when, without search or arrest warrants, officers of the Atlanta Police Department ("APD") raided the Atlanta Eagle ("the Eagle") and Rawhide Leather ("Rawhide") on September 10-11, 2009 (the "Raid"). During the Raid, officers of the APD detained all persons who were customers or employees at the Eagle and Rawhide (forcing most to lay flat on the ground, many to lay in spilled beer and broken glass, and restraining some with handcuffs); used excessive force, including shoving individuals to the floor and kicking others already on the floor; made threats of improper and excessive violence; made anti-gay slurs; searched all persons on the premises; seized the driver's licenses or other ID documents of persons on the premises; and entered the names of persons on the premises into a police computer and checked their names against a police database. These actions were taken without particularized reasonable suspicion or probable cause to believe that any individual patron, let alone every person at the establishment, was involved in any criminal activity whatsoever.

4. The only charges against anyone at the Eagle on the night of the Raid were filed against Eagle employees, for Atlanta City Code violations relating to allegedly unlicensed adult entertainment, because four dancers were observed, in the words of the arresting officers, allegedly "wearing underwear" and "dancing."

5. Each and every patron of the Eagle and Rawhide Leather was detained, searched, and seized during the Raid. Not a single patron was charged with any crime.

6. Plaintiffs seek damages and declaratory and injunctive relief as set forth herein.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

7. This court has jurisdiction over the subject matter of this action pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1331, as this action arises under the laws and Constitution of the United States; pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1983; pursuant to its supplemental jurisdiction under 28 U.S.C. § 1367; and pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2201, as an actual controversy exists within this Court's jurisdiction. ALLEGATIONS OF FACT

40. On the evening of September 10, 2009, at some point before 11:00 PM, certain of the Defendants serving as undercover officers of the Atlanta Police Department entered the Eagle without a search or arrest warrant. On information and belief, these officers were assigned by final decisionmakers for the City to conduct an undercover investigation.

41. These officers entered the Eagle pretending to be customers.

42. While inside the Eagle, certain of the Defendant undercover officers who later participated in the activities described below consumed alcoholic beverages including Ketel One vodka, Tanqueray gin, Budweiser beer, and Amstel Light beer.

43. Later that evening, shortly after 11:00 PM, these Defendant undercover officers without displaying badges or identifying themselves as members of the Atlanta Police department, began screaming at patrons and employees to "hit the floor" and get down on the ground.

44. Several plaintiffs were in terror and feared for their lives, believing that the Eagle was being robbed or invaded by criminals or gay-bashers who might kill or injure them.

45. Shortly after the Defendant undercover officers inside the Eagle ordered everyone to lay on the floor, additional Defendant officers of the Atlanta Police Department, including members of the Red Dog Unit, forced their way into the Eagle, also without a search or arrest warrant, without requesting permission or consent to enter the premises, and outside the terms of the Eagle's invitation to the public. The Red Dog Unit is a special force of police officers used to "provide aggressive police presence in areas that have a high incidence of street drug sales, use, and drug related crimes" City of Atlanta Police, About Red Dog Unit, <http://www.atlantapd.org/index.asp?nav=RD&menu=42> (last visited Nov. 23, 2009).

46. These additional Defendant officers, many of whom were dressed in black, paramilitary-style uniforms which are not recognizable as police uniforms to those unfamiliar with the Red Dog Unit, stormed into the Eagle with a massive show of force but without verbally identifying themselves as police officers. They screamed at patrons and employees to lay flat on the floor with their faces against the floor and their hands behind their backs or in front of them and to "shut the fuck up."

47. Police officers shoved some of the patrons, including some of the Patron Plaintiffs, to the ground, and pressed their boots into the back of certain patrons, and some patrons were handcuffed by the police.

48. Certain patrons, including some of the Patron Plaintiffs, were made to lie on the floor in spilled beer and broken glass, and patrons who asked permission to move away from the broken glass were told to "stay down and shut the fuck up." Some of these patrons received cuts from the glass in which they were forced to lie.

49. During the raid, patrons were forced to remain flat on the floor, even long after the police officers had searched them and found them to be unarmed,

50. Some patrons, including some of the Patron Plaintiffs, who were told to move to another part of the Eagle were again made to lay flat on the ground, with their faces against the floor, even after they had been searched, found to be unarmed, and moved.

51. Patrons, including Patron Plaintiffs were detained, either handcuffed, or flat on the ground with their faces against the floor, between thirty minutes and two-and-a-half hours after the raid began, until they were eventually released one by one or in small groups.

52. Patrons, including some of the Patron Plaintiffs, who asked questions of the police officers, including asking for their names or badge numbers and/or why they were being detained, were told to "shut the fuck up," some were threatened with arrest for disorderly conduct, some were threatened with being handcuffed, some were threatened with violence and physical harm, and some were retaliated against by being forced to remain at the Eagle long after they had been searched.

53. All persons at the Eagle complied fully, promptly, and peacefully with all demands made by the officers, no person at the Eagle offered any physical resistance to the officers whatsoever, and none was charged with obstructing the officers in any way.

54. During the Raid, police officers kicked some patrons, including some of the Patron Plaintiffs, who were laying on the floor for no legitimate law enforcement purpose.

55. During the Raid, police officers kicked down at least one door at the Eagle (in full sight and sound of nearby patrons) despite the offer by an Eagle manager to open the door for them.

56. Officers forcibly and without consent searched patrons, including some of the Patron Plaintiffs, as they lay on the floor, putting their hands in the patrons' pockets and removing keys, cash, wallets, cell phones, driver's licenses, and anything else in the patrons' pockets, or ordered patrons to empty the contents of their pockets onto the floor where they lay.

57. Officers took identification documents from every Patron Plaintiff, either by forcibly taking the same without consent or by demanding that patrons hand over their identification documents. An officer entered ID information about each of the Patron Plaintiffs into a police computer and checked each of those names against a police database.

58. The aforementioned practices in conducting the Raid were done pursuant to official policy or custom and usage, as admitted by Deputy Chief Carlos Banda, in his public statement that everything done at the Eagle was standard practice for Red Dog, which does everything "the same thing in each situation" and "[by the numbers] they do it all the same way, they don't vary [in how they do it]." Carlos Banda, Deputy Chief, Atlanta Police Dep't, Community

Forum at the Virginia-Highland Church (Oct. 5, 2009), available at <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cjTYf2WHWbw#t=08m43s>.

59. On information {viz. Richard Pennington, Chief, Atlanta Police Dep't, Press Conference (Sept. 14, 2009)) and belief, at least twenty-one officers, including nine undercover and twelve uniformed officers, were present inside the Eagle on September 10-11, 2009, supported by numerous additional officers outside the Eagle, three Atlanta Police prisoner transport vehicles, and numerous police cars and other vehicles. The true number of officers inside and outside the Eagle is not yet known by the Plaintiffs.

60. Even after many of the Individual Plaintiffs and Plaintiff Ray were told that they were free to go, and in fact ordered to leave the premises, the Raiding Party Defendants impeded their ability to do so by continuing to block their cars in the parking lot with police vehicles and refusing to move those police vehicles when Plaintiffs pointed out that they could not leave.

61. During the course of the raid, police officers searched the premises of the Eagle, including cash registers, beer coolers, the manager's office, and other private areas.

62. Atlanta Police officers also entered the premises of the Rawhide Leather store, without a search or arrest warrant, and searched the premises of the Rawhide Leather store, including the cash register.

63. Atlanta Police officers also entered private, nonpublic areas located in the same building as the Eagle without a search or arrest warrant, including the private office of Ramey & Kelley shareholders Richard Ramey and Robert Kelley, and the private residence of Plaintiff Shepherd, who lives in an apartment located at the same address as the Eagle.

64. Atlanta Police officers searched Plaintiff Shepherd's home without a search or arrest warrant.

65. Atlanta Police officers arrested Plaintiff Shepherd inside his home without a search or arrest warrant.

66. No illegal drugs were found on anyone present at the Eagle, Rawhide Leather, or in the private home of Plaintiff Shepherd.

67. "No illegal drugs were found on the premises of the Eagle, Rawhide Leather, or in the private home of Plaintiff Shepherd.

68. The only charges filed against anyone at the Eagle on the night of the raid were for Atlanta City Code violations relating to alleged unlicensed adult entertainment, because four dancers were observed, in the words of the arresting officers, allegedly "wearing underwear" and "dancing." These charges are outstanding, and none of the Plaintiffs, with the exception of Plaintiff Shepherd, was the subject of such charges.

69. Not a single patron of the Eagle or Rawhide Leather was charged with any crime.

70. Contemporaneous with the filing of this Complaint, Plaintiffs are serving upon the City of Atlanta an Ante-Litem Notice pursuant to O.C.G.A. § 36-33-5, and anticipate amending this complaint to allege additional state law claims against the City of Atlanta.

FIRST CLAIM FOR RELIEF
(Unconstitutional Search and Seizure)
Violation of the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States
Constitution Brought Under 42 U.S.C. § 1983
(by all Plaintiffs against all Defendants)

71. Plaintiffs repeat and reallege each and every allegation in the foregoing paragraphs as if fully set forth herein.

Unreasonable Seizure

72. Defendants had no particularized and objective basis to believe that any of the Patron Plaintiffs they seized had committed or were committing any criminal offense.

73. The detentions of the Individual Plaintiffs were unreasonable seizures under the Fourth and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution.

74. Atlanta Police officers had no particularized probable cause to believe that any of the Patron Plaintiffs had committed or were committing any criminal offense.

75. The seizure of the Individual Plaintiffs was excessive and unreasonable in duration and scope.

76. The seizure of the Patron Plaintiffs and Plaintiff Shepherd constituted an arrest, for which probable cause was required.

77. The arrest of the Patron Plaintiffs and Plaintiff Shepherd was unreasonable.

78. Atlanta Police officers intended to confine the Individual Plaintiffs, committed acts resulting in their confinement, and the Individual Plaintiffs were aware of their confinement. The Individual Plaintiffs reasonably did not believe that they were free to leave.

Excessive Force

79. Atlanta police officers used and directed excessive force against the Patron Plaintiffs when they were not authorized to utilize any force.

80. Defendants' use of excessive force was unreasonable.

Unreasonable Search

81. Atlanta police officers had no reasonable belief that any of the Individual Plaintiffs was armed and dangerous.

82. The pervasive searches of the Patron Plaintiffs and Plaintiff Shepherd were unreasonable.

83. Atlanta police had neither a warrant, nor probable cause plus exigent circumstances, authorizing a search of any of the Patron Plaintiffs or Plaintiff Shepherd.

84. The searches of the Patron Plaintiffs and Plaintiff Shepherd, including forcible and unconsented searching of the contents of their pockets, and seizing personal articles including keys, cash, wallets, and driver's licenses and other identification documents, were unreasonable.

85. The search of the personal residence of Plaintiff Shepherd and the business premises of Plaintiff Ramey & Kelley, and Plaintiff Rawhide Leather was unreasonable,

86. Defendants acted with reckless, deliberate and callous indifference to the constitutionally protected rights of the Plaintiffs.

87. It was clearly established on September 10, 2009 that detaining, arresting, or searching the Patron Plaintiffs, about whom officers had no reasonable suspicion or probable cause, simply because they were present at a particular bar, would violate the Patron Plaintiffs' clearly-established constitutional rights. The Defendants had fair warning that their conduct would violate the Constitution, and no reasonable officer could have believed that the detention, arrest, or search of the Patron Plaintiffs was legal.

88. It was clearly established on September 10, 2009 that entering or searching the Eagle or the Rawhide Store in the absence of a warrant or probable cause plus exigent circumstances would violate the Corporate Plaintiffs' clearly-established constitutional rights. The Defendants had fair warning that their conduct would violate the Constitution, and no reasonable officer could have believed that the warrantless entry and search of the Eagle or the Rawhide Store was legal.

89. It was clearly established on September 10, 2009 that entering or searching Plaintiff Shepherd's private home in the absence of a warrant or probable cause plus exigent circumstances would violate Plaintiff Shepherd's clearly-established constitutional rights. The Defendants had fair warning that their conduct would violate the Constitution, and no reasonable officer could have believed that the warrantless entry and search of Plaintiff Shepherd's private home was legal.

90. It was clearly established on September 10, 2009 that arresting Plaintiff Shepherd within his private home in the absence of a warrant, or probable cause plus exigent circumstances, would violate Plaintiff Shepherd's clearly-established constitutional rights. The Defendants had fair warning that their conduct would violate the Constitution, and no reasonable officer could have believed that the warrantless arrest of Plaintiff Shepherd in his private home was legal.

91. It was clearly established on September 10, 2009 that conducting warrantless raids using mass detentions and searches of patrons and bar premises, seizure of patrons' identity documents, and running warrant checks on all patrons would violate the Plaintiffs' clearly-established constitutional rights. The Defendants had fair warning that their conduct would violate the Constitution and any reasonable officer would have known of the binding legal precedent that clearly established these rights.

92. The Defendants' actions at the Eagle were conducted pursuant to an Atlanta Police Department policy, practice and/or custom with the force of law (A) to conduct warrantless raids using mass detentions; (B) to search and seize everyone located at the scene of a "raid," or at a place where police believe a crime has been committed, without regard to particularized reasonable suspicion or probable cause; (C) to search all individuals found at the scene of a "raid," or at a place where police believe a crime has been committed, and to seize their identification documents and to run warrant checks on them without regard to particularized reasonable suspicion or probable cause or exigent circumstances; (D) to apply force and tactics of forceful control (including forcing individuals to lay flat on the ground and/or otherwise restraining them) to persons found at the scene of a "raid," or at a place where police believe a crime has been committed, without regard to a particularized reasonable belief that any individuals are armed and dangerous.

93. A real and actual controversy exists, necessitating declaratory and injunctive relief from this Court, in that Defendant City of Atlanta continues to maintain the legality of the aforementioned policies, practices and/or customs. Patron Plaintiffs continue to be specially subject to such raids.

94. Plaintiffs are entitled to damages, declaratory relief and injunctive relief as set forth herein.

SECOND CLAIM FOR RELIEF

100. Defendants acted with reckless, deliberate and callous indifference to the constitutionally protected rights of the Individual Plaintiffs.

101. It was clearly established on September 10, 2009 that preventing persons from exercising their First Amendment right verbally to question, challenge, or criticize the police in a manner that does not obstruct the officers, or punishing them for doing so, violated those Individual Plaintiffs' clearly-established constitutional rights. The Defendants had fair warning that their conduct would violate the Constitution, and no reasonable officer could have believed that under these circumstances it was legal to prevent persons from exercising their First Amendment rights or punish them for doing so.

102. The Defendants' actions at the Eagle were conducted pursuant to an Atlanta Police Department policy, practice and/or custom with the force of law to prevent persons from exercising their First Amendment right verbally to question, challenge, or criticize police officers in a manner that does not obstruct legitimate law enforcement activity, and/or punish them for doing so.

103. A real and actual controversy exists, necessitating declaratory and injunctive relief from this Court, in that defendant City of Atlanta continues to maintain the legality of the aforementioned policy, practice and/or custom.
